

a little part of me is in you and a little part of you is in me

OR the whole of you is there As me and vice versa.

What is the whole? never fully known children immediately sense if you see them as a person first, they get that respect and the interaction from then on is completely different, expansive, in my experience.

What is the difference between child as concept as child as phenomenon?

Performativity
What do concepts do

How many adults who has not been children are taking care of our institutions? What needs to be done to reveal this highly dangerous phenomenon happening to our systems of health, politics, military climate we are all in the hands of children

Thanks to Sylvia - I will definitely try to make my teaching more "child-like" or "appropriate" for children, not only for adults. It will help me make my practice more fun, I think!

"Child" is an artificial boundary that suggests ignorance but is enacting knowledging.

"Child" is an artificial boundary that suggests ignorance but is enacting knowledging.
"Adult" is an artificial boundary that suggests knowledge but is enacting ignorancing

Child as incomplete human...adult as complete human having to teach the incomplete human. Very Piaget.

Why the need for definitions? Definitions work against indeterminacy

Who is treated "worst" by the categories their in: children or adults?

Maybe we could do with less determinacy, but to act we define, is the key to remain aware this is an agential cut?

Playful adult pig with beard moustache and red lipstick. Childish
